

Dr. Omar Miranda-Novales
Social psychologist and body oriented psychotherapist.

I was born and raised in the Mayan Nahual Tradition. In 1990 I left my homeland Mexico to pursue an academic career in Europe. Along my path I studied Clinical Psychology, Social Psychology, Body Oriented Psychotherapy.

In my work I integrate the academic and old traditional knowledge of the Mayan people, with Dance, Theater and performing Arts. My academic interests and curiosity for other cultures led me to study and work in countries such as USA, Russia, Spain, Italy and Germany.

In 2015 I created the therapeutic methods of dynamic integration.

The Mayan tradition offers a unique approach based on the ethnomethodology of the Mexican healing techniques which I learned since my childhood.

Currently I am conducting experiential workshops and trainings throughout Europe.

Celebration of life and transformation

The Aztec, Mayan and other ancient Mexican cultures considered death as a living entity, a transition of life, not at ending.

Dying is seen as a positive, joyful and powerful event, even a funny one, because death is not only part of the existence, it is a natural progression of the circles of Nature in which everything changes. Transformation and movement is one constant of life.

When we die, we return to mother earth, where we can be integrated to the consciousness of everything. In this sense we become part of the timeless continuum of space, our new home.

Modern Mexicans still celebrate death in the same way they cheer life. They flatter and woo it, joke about it, care about it and dance with it, by lifting their glass to it and laughing at it. Finally, they challenge it, and in the challenging, death loses its power to intimidate them. Once they know death intimately, death is no longer wrapped in a cloak of mystery or causes them to fear the darkness.

Within the context of the Mexican Day of the Death celebration participants will explore existential issues in order to meet and enhance their true Self. The method is quite simple, to see life as a consequence of death and to see death as a happy, constant process of letting go old patterns and beginning new structures.

This perspective leads attendants to deep transformation processes, in which they can reinvent themselves.

The intensive journey in Mexico, Celebration of life and transformation encourage life in motion as an essential quality of one's character, because everyone should experience the Day of the Death, a party of love and change.

Some of the activities, which will take place in Mexico are:

- > Day of the Death celebration at Tecomitl/ Miacatlan.
- > Mexican sweat lodge ritual at a sacred spot.
- > Ritual of mirrors in sacred ground.
- > Visit to the witch market in Mexico-City.
- > A variety of self centered experiences and some relaxing activities.
